

Louro Preto

Durability class Above ground: class 1.

Due to its highly favourable properties, the beautiful Louro Preto hardwood is extremely suitable for Applications use for facade cladding, posts, panelling, decking, sheet piling and sheeting.

Specific gravity Fresh 950 kg/m3. At 12% moisture content 660-820 kg/m3.

Louro preto hardwood has a light golden brown to dark brown colour and sometimes shows dark Colour streaks and spots. The wood darkens somewhat under the influence of sunlight. The sap of this type of wood is yellowish white to gray. Louro preto has a beautiful shine.

Details Freshly processed Louro preto usually has a very pleasant smell.

Grain Straight but also cross thread or wavy thread can occur. Timber texture Louro preto wood has a fine to moderately coarse grain.

Up to a thickness of about 33 mm, Louro preto dries relatively easily, with some tendency to deform. Drying

Thicker pieces are difficult to dry.

Hardness 4900 N Janka.

Workability Louro preto wood can be worked well and smoothly finished. Screwing/nailing Good. Pre-drilling is recommended due to a risk of splitting. Finishing of surface Finishing with non-film-forming products is reasonably easy.

Botanical name Ocotea. spec. div.

Origin area Louro preto wood grows in South America.

Background information There are only limited dimensions available in sawn wood.

Family Lauraceae

Projects Facade De Stadhouder, Erkerhuis Midlaren, Playground Snowworld